

Online Mortgage Refinancing

Online mortgage companies can save you a lot of money when mortgage refinancing. Comparison shopping on the Internet is quick and easy; however, you need to keep an eye out for hidden fees. Here are several tips to help you avoid paying hidden "Computerized Loan Origination" fees when mortgage refinancing online.

Home mortgage refinancing online, is fast becoming the way to get a low cost home loan when you need it. In a recent article, Henry Gardner, vice president with emortgages says, he thinks that online mortgages will be the mainstream in the next two to three years.

Lending Tree is just one example; there are many other companies on the Internet pulling the same scam. How do these online mortgage broker sites take advantage of homeowners when mortgage refinancing? Lending Tree openly claims that they do not charge you a fee for using their service. Reading the Licenses & Disclosure reveals this is simply a lie. The Licenses & Disclosure states that if you apply for mortgage refinancing with one of the lenders they promote, that lender will charge you a Computerized Loan Origination fee. This charge will appear on your Good Faith Estimate and you will pay Lending Tree as much as $1300 when you close on the mortgage loan.

There are many great reasons for wanting a refinancing mortgage loan. Consolidating debt is one of those great reasons. While mortgage interest rates are still low is a good time to pay off those high interest credit cards. You can put mortgage refinancing to work now by reducing your high interest debt.

When you apply for a loan online, you can expect to find lenders eager to compete to give you their best loan deal possible. With just one easy online application you can have several refinance loan offers to choose from. Yes, searching online for the best home refinance rates can be a very smart choice!
